

Food and Beverage industry in Świętokrzyskie

Świętokrzyskie - hard to pronounce, easy to invest

The term Świętokrzyskie (English: Holy Cross; German: Heiligkreuz) comes from the name of the mountain range located in the central part of Kielce Highlands. It owes its name to the relics of the Holy Cross stored in the monastery on the Bald Mountain. The Świętokrzyskie Mountains, in addition to a number of natural assets, is one of the oldest mountain ranges in Europe.

Świętokrzyskie province lies in the heart of Poland and covers the area of nearly 11.7 thousand km². Its attractive location is determined by the proximity to major Polish cities such as Warsaw, Cracow and Łódź, and the presence of domestic routes connecting the north and the south, as well as the east and the west of the country. Furthermore to that, due to its location in eastern part of Poland, the province may constitute the gateway to eastern markets such as Russia, Ukraine and Belarus.

The region's economy is mainly based on industry and agriculture. The last years have brought a rapid development for the Świętokrzyskie province. The region, year by year, has been registering substantial increase in GDP per capita, at the level of 5% per annum.

Eastern Poland – the Region of young and well-educated people

The Eastern Poland Macroregion covers five Polish provinces, namely Świętokrzyskie, Warmia and Mazury, Podlaskie, Lubelskie, and Podkarpackie, accounting for a third of Polish territory. The region is inhabited by over 21% (8.1 million) of total population of Poland.

The Macroregion is characterized by favourable demographics with high share of young and well-educated people. Almost one third of the population is under 25 years of age and there are over 355 thousand students studying at 53 universities, including several technical universities and engineering colleges. The labour costs remain among the lowest in the EU and about 15-20% lower than in other parts of the country. At the same time, the unemployment rate is higher than in other provinces. As a result, Eastern Poland offers optimum conditions for investors.

The investment potential of the region is reinforced by five dynamically growing Special Economic Zones offering tax exemptions and other financial incentives to attract and retain investors.

Food and beverage industry as one of the drivers of the regional economy

The food and beverage industry is one of the key sectors of the Polish economy, playing particularly important role also in Świętokrzyskie. Its rapid development has been due to, among others, a revival of foreign trade, which enabled Polish companies to leverage competitive advantages, such as high quality of agricultural products and lower costs resulting in favorable pricing of food and beverage products. In recent years, the food and beverage industry in the Świętokrzyskie province has been expanding rapidly. In 2011, the production value of food amounted to almost 560 million EUR, and was 50% higher compared to 2008. In total, there are nearly a thousand food and beverage companies operating in the province, the majority of which specializes in production, processing and preserving of meat, dairy products, fruit and vegetables as well as bakery and farinaceous products.

The food and beverage sector (incl. agribusiness) has developed, to a great extent, due to the rich tradition of farming in the Świętokrzyskie province and an extensive raw materials base. The province plays an important role in the plant and animal agricultural production in Poland. There are nearly 140 thousand farms in the region, and the agricultural area covers 535 thousand ha (almost half the region's area). The region is mainly dominated by small farms, often using extensive farming methods to ensure that supplied products are natural and of finest quality. The Świętokrzyskie province remains one of the key regions in Poland in terms of the crop value of the following fruit and vegetables:

- Vegetables: cucumbers, beets, tomatoes and carrots;
- Fruit: apples, plums, cherries, strawberries and currants.

The Świętokrzyskie province plays also a significant role in production of organic food. There are about 1.3 thousand ecological farms in the region covering 14 thousand ha of agricultural land. In addition, there are many cattle farms that make Świętokrzyskie a significant nationwide supplier of beef, as well as milk and dairy products. Furthermore to that, labour costs in the food and beverage sector in Świętokrzyskie are among the lowest in the Macroregion as well as countrywide – the average monthly wage amounts to approximately 530 EUR. Development of the food and beverage sector in Eastern Poland, including Świętokrzyskie, is also fuelled by many business institutions and cooperatives supporting its growth. These include i.a. "Pomidor z Ziemi Sandomierskiej" ("Tomato from Sandomierz") or the gardening and orchard "Ekologiczna żywność" ("Organic food") cluster, just to name a few.

Investment potential and cooperation with foreign countries

Long traditions in the industry, availability of well-educated and skilled workforce, low labour costs, investment areas tailored to the needs of businesses, as well as a central location make the Świętokrzyskie province a right place to invest.

The total value of foreign direct investments (FDI) in the region in years 2008-2011 amounted to 311 million EUR. German and British companies are among the largest foreign investors in Świętokrzyskie.

The attractiveness of the Świętokrzyskie province is also enhanced by its strong export orientation. Every year the region records a significant export growth. In 2012 the export value of the province was 30% higher as compared to 2008. The main trading partners remain Austria and Germany with combined share of total export value from the region of nearly 25%. Moreover, the export to these countries has been growing at a two-digit growth rate over the last 4 years, much higher than the overall average export growth rate (about 7% p.a.).

In 2012, export of food, beverages and tobacco from the Świętokrzyskie province exceeded 100 million EUR and was about two-thirds higher compared to the year before. Austria and Germany are the leading destination countries for the food and beverage products from the region, accounting for over 40% share of the total export value.

The main exported product categories comprise of fruit and vegetables, processed and preserved meat as well as meat and dairy products.
